

Cut out and paste to the "On the Trail" map in the July issue.

Waiting in Winter Quarters

By Jennifer Maddy

A New City

After the Prophet Joseph Smith was killed, Nauvoo, Illinois, became a dangerous place. The Saints fled their homes to find a safer place to live. In February 1846 the first group of Saints started their trek westward, but bad weather and sickness slowed them down. By the time they had crossed Iowa, it was too late in the year to make it over the Rocky Mountains before winter.

So Church leaders chose a place where the Saints could stay for the winter. They named it Winter Quarters.

This display inside the Mormon Trail Center in Winter Quarters recreates a camp on the Iowa trail where William Clayton wrote the hymn "Come, Come, Ye Saints" (Hymns, no. 30).

It would be hard to live in a tent all winter! Brrrr!

You're telling me! The pioneers must have had a lot of faith.

Working Together

Some people built homes out of logs or sod. Others lived in tents and caves. The Saints tried to be happy during the long, cold winter. They helped each other. They went to concerts and sang and danced. They built a flour mill, a town hall, and a basket-making factory.

Moving On

The time the Saints spent in Winter Quarters was difficult. Many people died. But the pioneers had faith that the Lord would bless them and help them make it to Zion. When spring finally came, the first group of pioneers left Winter Quarters to journey to the Salt Lake Valley.

At the Mormon Trail Center, you can see the kinds of supplies the Saints took on their journey west. Church leaders told them to take flour, spices, rice, beans, and cows for milk.

Some of the Saints built log cabins to live in while they were in Winter Quarters.